Red Sox Now Lead With Two Games to Opponent's One in the World's Series Contest—Game Played at Boston Today.

Braves' Field, Boston, Oct. 11.—The third game of the 1915 world's series was fought out here this afternoon over the wonderful diamond and wide green reaches of the largest and most beautiful baseball park in the world. It was a fit setting for the great battle that was to decide whether the Boston Red Sox or the desperately fighting Phillies would have the "jump" by taking the odd contest.

The change from the little Phillie park in the city of Brotherly Love to this wonderful field was most striking. The new Philadelphia plant built by the new owners, the Guggenheims, and there would still be space left to keep "Gavy" Cravath home run in the lot.

A Wonder Day. It was a wonder day too, with not a cloud in the sky and Indian summer in the air. The water of the harbor was calm and the breeze from the sea was just what was needed for the contest.

Never were conditions more ideal for a contest between the two champions of the big leagues and the outpouring of the excited Boston fans early gave promise of a record breaking throng. Always one of the most enthusiastic ball towns in the country, Boston was all but crazy in a delirium of joy today over the prospect of a game today that was expected to be the turning point in the great series that began in Philadelphia last Saturday evening with honors even.

No little of the anticipatory excitement today was due to the fact that the Boston Red Sox were expected to make his second start and attempt to halt the slugging Sox back for another defeat. The whole faith of the Phillies was wrapped up in "Alex."

Manager Carrigan's early morning address to the team was a masterpiece of the American league. "Dutch" was anxious to match his wit and skill against the hope of the Phillies, and with these master craftsmen in the box a hair raising pitching duel was looked forward to.

The Game. Today's game finished only when Boston scored its final run in the ninth inning. The final score of two to one in favor of the Boston City team does not tell the game played.

Neither side scored in the first two innings. In the third the Nationals crossed the rubber for one run but Boston failed to score.

In the fourth Boston made one run in its half but the Quakers were not up to the mark and failed to find Leonard for enough to count. The fifth and seventh were the same results, neither side scoring.

Then came the eighth but despite "Dutch" Alexander's pitching the Sox scored. The ninth opened with Philadelphia at bat but they could not find Leonard while Boston reached the mighty Alexander for enough hits to tally one, two, Philadelphia one.

Batteries: Philadelphia—Alexander and Burris. Boston—Leonard and Carrigan.

CONSERVE SUPPLIES PLEA OF GRAIN MEN

President of Association Declares That European War Will Cause Disruption of Activities.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Peoria, Ills., Oct. 11.—Warnings that peace in Europe probably will mean a disruption of present commercial activities in the United States and a plea for conservation of food products marked the address which Lee G. Metcalf of Illinois, Ill., delivered as president of the Grain Dealers' National association at the convention of the organization here today. Mr. Metcalf spoke at the convention's initial session, which was occupied otherwise with addresses of welcome and a report from Charles Quinn of Toledo, Ohio, secretary-treasurer.

"When peace comes the cost of the war must, of necessity be counted," said Mr. Metcalf. "Heavy debts must be extinguished by the one and only means of so doing—taxation. Many who have been rich and powerful in foreign commerce will have less of riches and power. When this great overlying of the pendulum of activity quiets itself, other and opposite results to those now being experienced will be but natural and therefore must be looked for and dealt with."

Mr. Metcalf quoted statistics which show that the cost of the war for one year, including loss of national incomes, was 45 billion dollars. "No one can comprehend a sum so vast as this," he said. "Its dissemination throughout many countries in the purchase of supplies has carried actual famine and death to millions of people and has been made worse by the fact that the demand for our soil products has, in all probability, exceeded anything it would have been under normal conditions. We have benefited through the closing of Russian and other outlets. While such conditions abroad remain, it seems probable that benefits will continue to accrue to us."

Discussing conservation, Mr. Metcalf said it had been suggested that the waste in transit for the country shipped to the foreign markets of the grains and seeds in this country would exceed in value annually the losses paid by fire insurance companies for elevators and elevator equipment. He said that if this is true, part of the fault must be charged to the railroads for their failure to provide sound, clean, ample and timely equipment for the transportation of all kinds of goods and seeds. He urged also that shippers exercise more care in loading grain.

In another portion of his address Mr. Metcalf asked members of the association to support the Carranza government in Mexico. He said that Carranza was the only man in Mexico who was recognized by the United States and other legislative bodies. He predicted that several illis antagonistic to the interests of the trade would be introduced in the next congress.

PLANS KEPT A SECRET

Plans for Wedding Trip Are Not Revealed—President Goes Shopping and Buys Traveling Bag.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Oct. 11.—President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt, his fiancée, today began making preliminary arrangements for their wedding. They are not discussing their detail plans even with intimate friends and relatives. A wedding trip is considered, but to what place is not revealed and may be kept secret for a time. The presidential yacht, Mayflower, may be used. Reports that the couple might go to the San Diego or San Francisco exposition apparently was dispelled today when the president, replying to an invitation from school children in San Diego, asking him to visit the exposition, wrote back that he sees no possibility of visiting the Pacific coast at present. The president went on a short shopping trip this morning and bought a traveling bag.

Congratulations from all parts of the world continue to arrive at the white house. One cablegram came from President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala. The president is answering the messages personally. Despite reports that the wedding might be held very soon it was said today in very well informed quarters, that the plans still were for wedding early in December. It still is planned to have the ceremony in Mrs. Galt's home here. The president and Mrs. Galt are being urged to go to Pass Christian, Miss., for their honeymoon by the Misses Lucy and Mary Smith, cousins of the president, whose home is at New Orleans.

The president spent Christmas two years ago at Pass Christian and it was suggested that he might be married during the Christmas recess of congress and go for a short trip south.

WARDEN SPEAKS ON PRISON DISCIPLINE

Should Punish Prisoner For Violations Not Because of Power, But For His Own Good.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Oakland, Cal., Oct. 11.—Prison discipline is a subject through force or fear, destroys all the good in a man, according to a report on that topic made to the convention of the American Prison Association today by T. P. Sale, warden of the state prison at Folsom, Cal. "Discipline in prisons," said Mr. Sale, should be the same as in any other place. Whatever punishment is administered should be for the good of the prisoner. He should be after you have convinced him that he has violated the rules, done wrong, and that his punishment is necessary if good principles are to be maintained. Always be careful to let him understand what is done is for his good and not because you have the power to do so.

Good discipline is necessary for the government of a prison, whether it be penal, industrial or otherwise. Many inmates are serving time for lack of training and discipline in early life. The result is a discipline for all law and order. Strict discipline can overcome habits so formed. The above principles apply to the management of free men as well as prisoners. If needed is good discipline. The warden of the prison should be a man of high character and principles that would help the inmates to rely upon their sense of honor in not betraying a trust, thereby making the foundation for the forming and strengthening of character. That they may reclaim their places in society when released.

Prisoners are human beings and are like other men. Human nature is the same the world over. If prison officials realize this, they will treat their nature to reciprocity—it is the same with prisoners. If superintendents and wardens and officers would treat their nature to reciprocity, it would go a long way toward solving the management and control of prisoners. "There are many things which aid prison management in maintaining discipline," the warden said. "First, see all daily and weekly papers, unimpaired writing privileges, amusements and entertainments, out-of-door recreation, good food, and religious and religious services, and many other things are helpful to the management in the government of prisoners. Prisoners as a rule resent any inhuman rule, but I believe if they could, under some well-defined law, be allowed in addition to what most prisons already allow, extra commutation of time for good service, for extra good service rendered by the individual who realizes that it is to his interest to render the very best service, that it would be a most incentive to the very best at whatever work is assigned them, and I believe that it would very materially aid prison management in maintaining good discipline."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New Orleans, Oct. 11.—The Rev. Byron Holley, pastor of St. George's Episcopal church, one of the most fashionable congregations in the city, early today shot and killed Lansing Pearsall, a prominent railroad man here. Dr. Holley told the police he shot Pearsall thinking he was a burglar. About six o'clock this morning Dr. Holley telephoned police headquarters he had shot a man in the rectory study. The minister told the police that while in his office he heard someone in his study adjoining. Taking a pistol he stepped into the study and saw a man near the door. "The intruder did not answer my question as to who he was, and what he wanted," Dr. Holley said, "and when I ordered him out he made a motion as if to draw a weapon. I fired and the man fell."

Several hours later the man was identified at the morgue by Nathan G. Pearsall, claim agent of the Texas and Pacific railroad, as his son, Lansing, twenty-two years old. No reason for the young man's presence in the rectory could be given by his parents or friends. Dr. Holley said he never had seen Pearsall before.

Police found a window in the rectory parlor had been opened. Young Pearsall lived in a flat block from the Holley home on the next street.

Even Women and Old Men Are Arming for Last Stand Defense of Their Country Give Stubborn Resistance.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Berlin, Oct. 11.—Attacks by the Austro-German forces invading Serbia are proceeding to the south of Belgrade. It was officially announced today. The announcement adds that the crossing of the Danube by the invading forces has been completed.

Meet Stubborn Resistance. London, Oct. 11.—The Austro-German armies, with the help of their giant 305 kilometer guns, crossed the Danube and Save rivers and occupied Belgrade, are meeting with stubborn resistance at the Serbian advance defense, but have not yet come in contact with the main Serbian forces.

The Serbians' plan of campaign depends considerably upon the amount of assistance they will receive from the allies' troops, but it is not believed that they will attempt in any event to make a decided stand north of the mountain range near Kraguevatz, which they already have proved to be a line offering superb facilities for defense. Telegrams from the Balkans, though not minimizing the seriousness of the Serbian position, reflect a tone of cheerful confidence in the ability of the allies ultimately to check the Austro-German invasion and successfully meet any further attack from the side of Bulgaria.

All Serbia in Arms. The national danger, says these telegrams, has united Serbia as never before, and throughout the country men physically unfit for service, army and women and old men are arming for the defense of their country.

The population of Macedonia Serbia has gathered into the French army, a million Serbians of both sexes and all ages, and are ready to dispute all attempts at Austro-German-Bulgarian conquest.

Germans Shell French Positions. The number of Germans left dead in front of allies' lines is estimated between 7,000 and 8,000 men.

The mass was celebrated in the Syrian rite, which is a very old and is more or less out of the ordinary western hemisphere and is common in the eastern hemisphere.

The evening lecture was interesting. Father Salome is highly educated and speaks English fluently and smoothly. The subject of the address was "The Syrian Rite." Personally, the speaker is a true type of the educated gentleman. His lecture, which might be termed, "A Message from Turkey," was a very interesting and was more of an educational character than a trip through the grounds from one who has been on the ground in every side of life in the Turkish domain.

The lecture was illustrated with stereoscopic views which made the subjects very real. He spoke of many interesting features of Turkish life. The sights and scenes in the Holy Land were beautiful, but more so than the pictures of "Christ in Famous Paintings."

DEFENDS SLAUGHTER OF STOCK TO CHECK SPREADING DISEASE

Killing of Diseased Stock Declared to Be Only Way of Eradicating the Foot and Mouth Plague.

St. Louis, Oct. 11.—Slaughter of domestic animals as the only effective means of eradicating the foot and mouth disease was upheld here today by Dr. George Dittewig of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States department of Agriculture. Dr. Dittewig spoke before the convention of the American Meat Packers' association, addressing the delegates in advance of the opening of regular sessions of the convention because of a previous engagement.

Dr. Dittewig said the system of immunization against the disease was too undeveloped to use with safety and that the experiences of Denmark and Germany in 1914 and 1915 proved that mere quarantine of infected animals with disinfection of premises was ineffective.

In discussing the importance of completely eradicating the disease from the United States, Dr. Dittewig said that there are approximately 55,000,000 cattle, 64,000,000 swine and 50,000,000 sheep in the country, and that if nothing were done to stamp out the infection it would with certainty spread to millions of animals in the live stock districts; inflict financial loss upon every owner of infected herds and enormous loss upon the live stock industry as a whole.

Speaking of the 1914 outbreak in the United States, Dr. Dittewig said that there is good ground for believing that the disease has been stamped out of the 21 of the 22 states invaded by the spread of the infection. The exception being Illinois in which several somewhat persistent centers of the infection still exist.

"If the people of that state will give the authorities the co-operation which is due under the conditions, and the courts will refrain from interfering at the request of opponents of the methods employed, the authorities may be relied upon to stamp out the last vestige of infection," he said.

The cost of suppressing this outbreak has been proportionate to the spread of the disease, but the benefit accruing from the expenditure is that the 12 million head of live stock animals in the United States have been protected against the foot-and-mouth disease and incalculable loss averted."

ADVOCATES BRANDING WISCONSIN CHEESE

Proposition Must First Meet Approval of Cheese Makers and Dealers.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—To be successful any plan for the branding of Wisconsin cheese must first receive the hearty approval and support of cheese dealers and makers.

That is the belief of John L. Sammis of the University of Wisconsin, who has made a thorough study of the branding of dairy products. He gives as his reasons for such conclusion the fact that the brands must be applied either at the makers' factory or at the dealers' warehouse, and that the operation among producers, manufacturers and dealers with some aid given later if found desirable by state authorities.

The principal reasons are given by Mr. Sammis for applying advertising labels to Wisconsin cheese are: First, that Wisconsin cheese is good and deserves wider advertising to consumers everywhere than it has ever received; and second, that consumers generally prefer labeled or branded goods to the same articles in bulk or in plain packages, because the brand enables them to recognize by sight as well as by taste the sort of cheese or other article which they like and to call for by name. The demand for Wisconsin cheese in comparison with unbranded products from other sources, he says, is likely to increase more rapidly if our cheese is labeled.

In answer to the criticism that all grades of Wisconsin cheese would bear the advertising label and that the poorer grades thus labeled might be sold at the same price as the better grades, Mr. Sammis replies that the different grades of cheese as they come from the factories are now sorted by dealers at their warehouses and that these dealers depend for their present and future business on their ability to select for shipment to every customer just the quality of cheese which the dealer knows will suit the customer's taste.

UNCLE SAM'S RURAL FREE DELIVERY SYSTEM IMPROVED BY MOTORS (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Washington, Oct. 11.—Motorization of the rural free delivery system in the United States has been started with more than 150 automobiles published between July 1 and today, and 250 others to be put in operation by Dec. 1. The Postoffice department announced.

Better service for less money to the public and better positions financially and otherwise for the carriers, are the reasons upon which the department based the motorized mail-route policy.

There were Oct. 11, these auto routes already running: Arkansas, 1; California, 23; Colorado, 2; Delaware, 1; District of Columbia, 2; Florida, 13; Georgia, 68; Idaho, 3; Indiana, 14; Iowa, 24; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 3; Louisiana, 2; Maryland, 3; Mississippi, 2; Nebraska, 1; Oklahoma, 31; Pennsylvania, 15; and Texas, 24.

By December 1, there will be four routes in Alabama, 4; Arizona, 4; California, 29; Colorado, 23; Delaware, 1; District of Columbia, 22; Florida, 22; Georgia, 127; Illinois, 3; Indiana, 14; Iowa, 24; Kentucky, 3; Louisiana, 2; Maryland, 3; Mississippi, 2; Nebraska, 1; Oklahoma, 31; Pennsylvania, 15; and Texas, 24.

Bureau says these autos will improve the farmer's mail and express facilities. He says time schedules are better and weather doesn't effect autos so much. He says an auto can do fifty to sixty miles a day, regular schedule.

He's going to pay these auto carriers $1,800 a year and make them supply their own cars and uniforms. He's going to adopt a regular style of auto and uniform. Carriers on wagon routes get only $1,200.

There's a carrier in Kansas who has an auto on a thirty-mile route who has been getting $1,200 and who is going to get $1,800, and he says the raise will more than meet his expenses, even when a good many miles have been added to his route.

BURNETT COUNTY FARMERS WILL TRY CO-OPERATIVE BREEDING OF DAIRY STOCK (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Grantsburg, Wis., Oct. 11.—A group of Burnett county farmers interested in the production of money-making animals have agreed to try out a plan of co-operative breeding which has been before the organization meeting of the Burnett County Jersey Breeders' association held in Orange, it was decided that four or five auxiliary clubs to the central association would be formed in different parts of the county. Pure bred and superior sties will be purchased for and kept in each of these groups and after being used in one community for two years a sire will be exchanged for one already tried in another of these groups. Physicians, food experts, medical writers and editors largely agree that the cumulative effect of the 2½ grains of caffeine in the average cup of coffee is responsible for the many troubles, such as sleeplessness, nervous prostration, heart palpitation, indigestion, etc., that subtly beset most regular coffee drinkers.

Some people seemingly hold up under regular coffee drinking without serious results, but modern thinkers, with respect for the fundamentals of health and longevity, are daily changing to

MILTON MAN CUTS HIS THROAT WITH RAZOR ON SUNDAY

Physicians Race With Death to Mercy Hospital, Arriving in Time for Life-Saving Operation.

Quick work by two Beloit physicians in bringing John Pfeiffer to the Mercy Hospital Sunday morning saved the man's life, after it had been discovered that Pfeiffer attempted to take his own life at the home of his daughter. His unconscious, blood-covered body was found in his bedroom, and the doctors raced in an automobile with Pfeiffer to the hospital.

On Thursday night the man was released from the Mendota hospital, believed to be improved in health. Either that night or early Sunday morning Pfeiffer became subject to a delusion that he was to be burned to the stake. During this insane idea Pfeiffer slashed his throat almost from ear to ear with a razor.

On the left side the razor penetrated to a great depth, barely missing the large artery but severing several small veins. His windpipe was slashed and after the ghastly act Pfeiffer fell to the floor and was slowly bleeding to death.

Four physicians took charge of the operation and after working for nearly three hours saved Pfeiffer's life. He was reported to have a good chance for recovery at the hospital, and will probably be sent back to the asylum.

MEANS A SHAKE-UP AMONG DEMOCRATS

Appointment of Aylward to Federal Judgeships Eliminates Gubernatorial Possibility.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—The practical certainty of the appointment of John A. Aylward of this city, as federal judge to succeed the late J. C. Seaman of the United States circuit, which includes Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, will eliminate a democratic gubernatorial possibility. During the past ten years Aylward has been one of the most persistent fighters in Wisconsin politics and many of the democrats charge that his uncompromising attitude may have prevented the defeat of local victories at the polls.

With the announcement that his appointment would surely be made by President Wilson, talk has been revived here as to the possible democratic gubernatorial possibility.

Just at the present time T. J. Cunningham of Chippewa Falls, twenty years ago secretary of state during the administration of Governor James DuSable, is receiving much attention from the democratic press. But a number of others are being mentioned, including William Ashland, La Crosse, Burt Williams, Beloit, and present internal revenue collector for the western district, E. J. Dempsey, Oakshosh, and Evan A. Evans of Baraboo.

A new line of looked for in democratic state politics is being beaten at the primaries and is said to taboo any use of his name in connection with being a candidate for governor twice defeated at the polls. John C. Karel of Milwaukee receives little further mention in state political circles.

The leaders are looking for new men and a complete alignment of new leaders back of the administration of President Wilson is expected in the new democratic campaign.

BELOIT ITALIAN WAR HERO; KILLED

Nick Rollo Mentioned for Deed of Valor in Battle With Austrians Three Weeks Ago.

Beloit, Oct. 11.—This city's large colony of Italians are firm in the belief that "it is better to be a live coward than a dead hero." They are basing their opinion on word received here Saturday of the death at Gorizia, Austria, of Nick Rollo, a local resident, who left here with fifty more about two months ago at the call to Italy's colors.

The letter, was killed as he performed a deed of valor in the Italian ranks about three weeks ago. This far nobody here has been able to furnish the explanation of his fellow countryman and determine just how Rollo was killed.

SIDE TALKS

By

The Child-Dominated Home.
In whatever corner worn-out and antiquated apartments are being tucked away in this progressive age, you will find one that is once familiar to our ears. It is, "Little children should be seen and not heard." It served on many an occasion to curb my enthusiasm on exuberance at a moment when these qualities threatened to project my personality too strongly. I can't say that the idea always appealed to me (them as much as it does now, sometimes).
For the old attitude toward children in the home has been abandoned. Children are both seen and heard. They no longer form a pleasing background, they dominate the domestic canvas.
One of my reader friends gives a case in point—an extreme case, perhaps, but one which may recall experiences which other reader-friends have suffered, in a lesser degree.
The Conditions Are Ideal.
I have just returned from a visit to a girl I used to know," she writes. "She has married very well, the world phrases it, and with a devoted husband, four children and an ample income, one would think she ought to have a happy home."
"Personally, I don't think she has. She prides herself upon the care she takes of her children and the time she devotes to them. The children are the center of her existence and, of course, the center of the home. They pervade its uttermost corner. Incidentally they are wholly undisciplined. The chief effort of the old friend is to keep them healthy, and in this she succeeds fairly well. Otherwise they run riot. They continually obtrude on conversation; at the table the conflict between their mother's desire to have them eat one thing and their own to eat something else dominates all else.

"Far from being seen and not heard, they are both seen and heard from six in the morning until six at night, and their mother breathes a sigh of relief when they are finally out of the way as she calls it. Her home isn't a home at all, it is an ill-ordered kindergarten."
As I said in the beginning, this is an aggravated case. But it is undeniable that children play a much more dominant part in the home than they did a generation or so ago. Personally, I am fond of children. But I cannot say I like to see children permitted to dominate the home and home life, undisciplined and unrestrained, as many do.
The Cute Little Thing Drops
The cute little thing of three who confidently reaches for your watch, and having confiscated it, drops it on the floor, and the sweet little chap who trustfully lays dirty or buttery fingers on your best gown while you are calling at his home, may be joys to their mothers, but they are not to the casual guest.
One mother proudly told me recently that she considered her little son a human being with just as much rights as she herself has. She did not wish to "curb his individuality." A child unquestionably has rights. As unquestionably other people have also. A child has a right to be disciplined. He must be disciplined in order to learn what his rights are, and in order that he may know when he exceeds them.

Married Life on $80 a Month

Molly Finds a Girl's Handkerchief in John's Pocket and Wants to Know the Explanation

"What's this?" Molly Sumner picked up a dainty handkerchief from the floor by her husband's chair. Her husband looked up from the column of figures he was adding, with a frown on his face.
"It looks like a handkerchief to me," he snapped.
"So it does to me. Who is this Julia?" Her lips were pressed to a firm line.
"Julia?" He looked at the name in the bit of linen. "Oh, Julia Aswood, the stenographer at the office." His finger was again traveling rapidly up the column of figures.
"How do you come to be carrying her handkerchief around, I should like to know?"
"Lord! Molly, is there anything specially criminal in my having her handkerchief in my pocket? I had a headache, and she was it with some smelling salts she had there. I forgot to give it back to her. He turned again to his column of figures.
"How lovely and thoughtful of her," remarked Molly in a sarcastic tone, smelling of the handkerchief for corroboration of his explanation. John did not answer. She took his silence for the confusion of guilt and eyed him with rising anger.
"Has this sympathetic maiden been your office companion long?" she inquired at last in tones ofasperity. She seated herself near the table and glanced at her husband.
"Naturally you don't want to talk about her, but I insist on knowing." She seated herself near the table and glanced at her husband.
"Lord of Heaven!" ejaculated John, rising and casting his pencil on the floor. "You are the one. Here I've got a chance to earn $5 and you sit there prating about your silly jealousies and hindering me so I can't do the work."
"It wouldn't have taken a minute to answer, not half as long as it has taken to rave at me," replied Molly slightly cowed by the violence of her husband's rage. "My question was a perfectly natural one."
"Well, go on with your perfectly table. "I've added that column three times now. If ever there was a woman who was a dog in the manger, naturally," he mimicked scornfully. "Let's get them over with so I can go back to my work."

"I only wanted to know how long she'd been there," Molly's voice was subdued.
"Over a year," he snapped. "What else?"
"Oh, it's no use asking you anything about her. I'd never know any more when I got through." Her lips trembled.
"Yes, put the very worst construction on everything I say, like you. You care nothing for me, never think of my comfort or my welfare in any way, but if another woman tries to relieve my headache it's a terrible thing."
"Oh, John, it isn't that." She burst into tears. "I know you don't love me and it's natural that you should learn to care for any woman you are slightly conversant with under the circumstances."
"Humph!" snorted her husband. "Women are queer creatures. I suppose you think a furious scene over a handkerchief would warm my heart with love for you; to be interrupted in a job of work that will take till midnight anyway, is such an incentive to devotion. Our loving days are over, but we could come to some sensible understanding we might patch up a life that would be more tolerable for both of us. By all means let us face facts."
"Now let me finish this work. You can take your crying into another room, can't you?"
Molly rose and went out.

DANISH RESIDENTS MEET AT ST. PAUL

Convention of Danish Brotherhood of America Begins Five Day Session

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—The quinquennial convention of the Danish Brotherhood of America began a five days session here today with what is said to be the largest gathering of former residents of Denmark and their descendants ever held in the United States. Special trains brought delegates and visitors from Chicago and points in the Northwest and several persons were said to have crossed the seas in order to be present at the meetings. Although most of the time of the convention is to be devoted to social entertainments, several subjects of importance to the organization are to be discussed. Under the present constitution the convention is held every five years and because of the large number of delegates the cost of such convention is from $30,000 to $50,000. An amendment to the constitution which is expected to meet with opposition would authorize the local lodges to hold district conventions and select delegates to the national convention, thus cutting down the number of delegates.
Another proposal would increase the number of membership assessments from eight to twelve each year and thereby build up the surplus of the organization.
Resolutions complimenting Denmark on her ability to remain neutral during the European war are to be presented the final day of the convention, when officers also will be elected and a city in the Middle West selected as the next meeting place.
Among the principal speakers today were T. P. Nelson of Seattle, supreme president, and Victor Ingemann of St. Paul.

CHICAGO'S FIRST "DRY" SUNDAY IS COMPLETE SUCCESS

Ten out of 7,152 Saloons Tilt Lid While Thousands Take Thrift to City Limits.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Chicago, Oct. 11.—Chicago's first week end on the water wagon was a complete, unqualified success. There were few violations of Mayor Thompson's Sunday closing order. Ten saloonkeepers of the 7,152 in the city, were declared to have failed to observe the Sunday closing order, to the letter. Only two of these were considered of sufficient importance to warrant a recommendation for revocation of license.

Those who did not care for the restrictions of the city found it comparatively simple to get outside the corporate limits of Chicago and quench their thirst. There were long lines of automobiles, trolleys, cars and even pedestrians with their baskets loaded toward the green fields, the beach houses, and the personal liberty of the limits to be found just beyond the city limits.
Almost everything wanted was found advertised in Gazette want ads. Read them and see.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two chums seventeen years old and would like a little advice. One of our boys followed us home and when we came to our house they came up on the porch and would not go until we made a date with them. We made a date with them and they came to our house. We met them several times after that, but they would not bring them home with us. They seem to be a little bit of a problem. What we want to know is if we should let them come home with us or if we should let them stay with their parents. We are a little bit of a problem. What we want to know is if we should let them come home with us or if we should let them stay with their parents.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am in love with a girl who is a show girl, or rather a chorus girl. I love her very dearly and I think she loves me. My parents are Christians and are very strict about me going with her. I am nineteen and she is seventeen. She wants me to go on the stage with her. Do you think it is right to go with her or stay with my parents. Stay with your parents. You would have very little chance for success on the stage and now is the time to be picking out some line of work with a future in it. Both you and the girl are too young to think of love.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is it proper for young men to smoke cigarettes in the presence of ladies? SLIPPERY LIZ. Yes, they should ask permission of the ladies first, and the ladies should grant it unless there is a very good reason not to.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am going to be married in October and am going to have a maid of honor and four bridesmaids. How should they go down the aisle of the church? (2) Where should the best man be when the bride and maid go down the aisle? (3) The maid of honor should walk alone, while the four bridesmaids should proceed down the aisle two by two. (4) The best man, with the groom and minister, should be waiting at the altar for the bride.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young lady of twenty-four, having been twice

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE NAILS.
Since prehistoric days, the nails have been used in an indispensable function. About all we use them for today is (1) opening penknives; (2) pinching out blackheads; (3) pushing buttons through trouser bands; and scratching wherever it may itch, and, on great provocation, (5) defending one self against an infuriated sister. Fingernails are a nuisance and a menace to health on the one hand; but on the other hand they furnish some people an occupation—manicuring. On both hands they are a boon to nervous individuals who work off lots of superfluous energy chewing them. We have it on the authority of a distinguished correspondent that nail-biting can be cured by painstaking attention to manicuring. The idea being that a smooth, trimmed and polished nail offers no subconscious temptation to the teeth.
An acute illness leaves a transverse mark on or furrow upon the nail, due to a feverish outbreak of matrix when the system is weak.
Persons whose metabolism is paying the way for joint disease notice that the nails are brittle.
Paronychia, or inflammation and suppuration at the edge or base of the nail, may be an acute infection or a chronic exema or acquired or hereditary luetic infection.
Ringworm of the nail is an occasional condition and an exceedingly obstinate one to treat, unless by autogenous vaccines, which seem to be very effective for ringworm of scalp, beard or nail. It is a raised, thickened, split and contorted. Ordinary "run around" is usually a streptococcus infection. A good treatment is a light wrapping of the nail, soaked in a solution containing one ounce of aluminum acetate, ten ounces saturated solution of boric acid, the whole wet dressing covered by a loose rubber finger-cap. Sooner cures require incision and drainage.

White speckling or marking on the nail is due to air bubbles in the nail. Does not indicate or foretell any illness.
Ingrowing nail is caused by degenerate footwear. Pointed shoes, narrow shoes and shoes with diverging inside sole lines make ingrowing nails. All these cases are helped by narrow strips of adhesive plaster so applied as to draw the sore skin edge away from the nail. If there is granulation tissue in the furrow ("proud flesh"), it must be cut away, burned away with lunar caustic, or oiled with alum or other astringent. Appliances other than correct shoes are useless for ingrowing nail. Bad cases require surgical relief at the hands of a doctor.
That poison which the ancients made of fingernails was undoubtedly the cultured microbes the then world carried, as do their modern descendants, in the furrow beneath the nails.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Magnesia or Soda?
Which is best to take as an anti-acid, soda or magnesia?
Answer—Milk of magnesia is preferable as a rule.
Carbon in Cylinders.
If one gets charcoal in the nose will it do any harm?
Answer—Not more than ordinary dust.

Household Hint

WITHOUT COOKING.
The following method entirely eliminates the tedious way of clarifying sugar and boiling the fruit, and needs no fire in its preparation:
Put one quart of white preserving tartaric brandy into a large stone jar having a tightly fitting cover. Then, for every pound of fruit perfectly dry, which you put in the brandy, use three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar. Stir every day, so that the sugar will be dissolved, using a clean wooden spoon. Every sort of fruit may be used, beginning with strawberries and ending with plums. One pound of cherries greatly enriches the color of the preserve.

The jar must be kept in a cool, dry place and the daily stirring never forgotten, for that is the secret of success. You may put just as much of one sort of fruit as you like and it may be put in from day to day as you happen to have it. The preserve will be ready for use within a week after the last jar is put in.

CAN FRUIT BE PUT IN.
By cooking a few jars of fruit each day while preparing a meal, you save gas as well as time. And soon have a large number of jars for winter use.
It is easily and quickly done, and retains its shape, color and flavor much better than when cooked in a preserving kettle.

Cover the bottom of the oven with a sheet of asbestos, the same as used for covering furnace pipes, which can be bought very reasonably.
If it is impossible to purchase the asbestos, use a large pan in which there is about two inches of water. Thoroughly sterilize the jars.
Make the syrup of sugar and water as sweet as needed.
Prepare the fruit the same as for cooking in the preserving kettle.
Fill the jars with the fruit, the pouring in sufficient syrup to fill the jar.
Run the blade of a silver knife around the inside of the jar. (Never use a steel knife.)
Place the jars in the oven either on the asbestos or in the pan of water.
The oven should be moderately hot. Cook the fruits fifteen minutes.
Remove from the oven and fill each jar with boiling syrup.
Wipe and seal air tight.
Large fruits may require about a pint of syrup to each quart jar. The small fruit require a little over half a pint of the syrup.
In this way you do not mind doing up fruits at all.
Tomatoes may be done in the same way and keep whole.
Baked Canned Peaches—Prepare fruit in usual way for canning. Fill jars first with fruit as full as possible, then with a thick syrup, allowing a little space in the neck of the jar for the juice of the fruit as it cooks.
Place your covers on top of jars; do not screw them on; then place the jars in a dripping pan of hot water, being careful not to let them touch each other, and set pan in a moderately heated oven. It does not take long for the peaches to cook this way, and they may be tasted by pricking with a fork. When done fill jars full of left-over syrup, place your rubber and screw on top.
Baked peaches retain the flavor which ordinarily escapes in steam when cooked on top of stove.
Berries, pears and plums are excellent prepared in this way.

RECIPES.
Omelet—Six eggs, four tablespoons milk, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, one tablespoon butter; break eggs together in a bowl, with a fork stir until highly mixed, add milk, salt and pepper, put butter in pan and see that it is not too hot, put in eggs. When it begins to set from the bottom lift with spatula, set some of the egg well run down under. When creamy fold and serve on hot platter with bacon. Two and one-half minutes is sufficient to cook. (Wheat or cream makes a more tender omelet than milk.)

Miss Margaret Green, who is about to make her bow to moving picture patrons in the film version of "Nedra," is fond of outdoor sports. She spends much of her time on the golf links, and likes tennis, swimming and skating. "I don't know ter blame ye none," he said slowly, almost apologetically, "but I've got ter say hit. Hit's a pity ye've seen fit ter say so many bitter things ter Anse. Mountain folks air mighty easy hurt in their pride, an' no one hain't niver dared ter cross him afore."

"No," she cried bitterly, "he will welcome the chance to humiliate and to refuse my plea. He has been waiting for this; to see me come to him a suppliant on bended knee, and then to laugh at me and turn me away." She paused and added brokenly: "And yet I've got to go to him in surrender—to be refused—but I'll go."

"Listen," said the preacher, and his words carried that soft quality of pacification which she had once or twice heard before. "There's a heap worse tellers than Bad Anse Havey. B2 ye could just hev seed yore way ter treat him a little different."

"How could I?" demanded Juanita hotly. "How could I be friends with a murderer and keep my self-respect?" The brown-faced man looked up at her and spoke simply.

"I've done kept mine," he said. The girl rose.

"Will you go with me?" she asked a little weakly. "I don't feel quite strong enough to go over there alone. While they are humbling me I would like to have a friend at hand. I think it would help a little."

"I'm ready now," and so, with the man who had guided her on other missions, she set out to make what terms she could with the enemy she had so stubbornly defied.

It seemed an interminable journey, though they took the short cut of the foot-trail over the hills.

The house that had come down to Anse Havey had been built almost a century before. It was originally placed in a section so large that elsewhere it would have been a domain—a tract held under the original Virginia grant. Since those days much of it had been parceled out as marriage portions to younger generations.

Cabins that had once housed slaves, barns, a smoke-house, an ice-house, and a small hamlet of dependent shacks clustered about a clearing which had been put there rather to avoid surprise than to give space for gardening. The Havey of two generations ago had been something of a hermit scholar, and in his son had lurked a diminished craze for books and an increasing passion for leadership.

The feud had blazed to its fiercest heat in his day, and the father of Bad Anse Havey had been the first Bad Anse. His son had succeeded to the title as a right of heritage, and had been trained to wear it like a fighting man. Though he might be a whelp of the wolf breed, the boy was a strong whelp and one in whom slept latent possibilities and anomalous qualities, for in him broke out afresh the love of

BOOKS:

It might have surprised his newspaper biographers to know how deeply he had combed the few volumes on the rotting shelves of the brick house, or how deeply he had thought along some lines. It might have amazed them had they heard the fire and romance with which he quoted the wise counsel of the foolish Polonius. "Beware of entering a quarrel, but being in, so bear thee that the opposer may beware of thee."

As to entering a quarrel, it sufficed his logic that he had been born into it; that he had "helred" his hatreds.

And because in these parts his father had held almost dictatorial powers, it had pleased him to send his son, just come to his majority, down to the state capital as a member of the legislature, and the son had gone to sit for a while among lawmakers.

CHAPTER XIII.

In other years Bad Anse Havey remembered the days in that house when the voices of women and children had been raised in song and laughter. Then the family had gathered in the long winter evenings before the roaring backlogs, and spinning wheel and quilting frame had not yet gone to the cobwebs of the cockloft. But that was long ago.

The quarter-century over which his memory traveled had brought changes even to the hills. The impalpable ghost of decay moves slowly, with no sound save the occasional click of a sagging door here and the snap of a cord there, but in twenty-five years it moves—and an inbred generation comes to impaired manhood. Since Bad Anse himself had returned from Frankfort his house had been tenanted only by men, and an atmosphere of grimness hung in its shadows. A half-dozen unkempt and loutish kinsmen dwelt there with him, tilling the ground and ready to bear arms. More than once they had been needed.

It was to this place that Juanita Holland and the preacher were making their way on that October afternoon.

At the gate they encountered a solitary figure gazing stolidly out to the front, and when their coming roused it out of its gloomy reverie it turned and presented the scowling face of Jeb McNash.

"Where air they?" he demanded wrathfully, wheeling upon the two arrivals, and then he repeated violently: "By heaven, where air they? Why hain't ye done fotted Dawn and Jesse?"

"Jeb," said the missionary quietly, "we done come over hyar fust ter hev speech with Anse Havey. What's he at?"

"I reckon he's in his house, but ye hain't answered my question. I'm ther one for ye ter talk ter fust. Hit's my sister ye've done been sufferin' ter consort with murderers, an' hit's me ye've got ter reckon with."

Brother Talbott only nodded. "Son," he gently assured him, "we aims ter talk with you, too, but I reckon ye hain't got no call ter hinder us from havin' speech with Anse fust."

For a moment Jeb stood dubious, then he jerked his head toward the house. "Go on in thar, ef ye sees fit. I hain't got no license ter stop ye," he said curtly; "but don't aim ter leave 'bout seein' me, too."

Several shaggy retainers were lounging on the front porch, but as Good Anse Talbott and Juanita turned in at the gate these henchmen disappeared inside. They would all be there to witness her humbling, thought the girl. It would please him to receive her with his jackal pack yelping derisively about him.

Then she saw another figure emerge from the dark door to stand at the threshold, and the flush in her cheeks grew deeper. Bad Anse Havey stood and waited, and when they reached the steps of the porch he came slowly forward and said gravely, "Come inside." He led the way, and they followed in silence.

Juanita found herself in the largest room she had yet seen in the mountains—a room dark at its corners despite a shaft of sun that slanted through a window and fell on a heavy table in a single band of light. On the table lay a litter of pipes, loose tobacco, cartridges and several books. Down the stripe of sunlight the dust-motes floated in pulverized gold, and the radiance fell upon a book which lay open, throwing it into relief, so that as the girl stood uncertainly near the table she read at the top of a page the caption, "Plutarch's Lives."

But she caught her breath in relief, for the retainers had disappeared.

Bad Anse stood just at the edge of the sun-shaft, with one side of his face lighted and the other dark.

But if to the girl the whole picture was one of somber composition and color, it presented a different aspect to Bad Anse himself as the young mountaineer stood facing the door.

"We've done come ter hev speech with ye, Anse," Talbott began. "I reckon ye know what hit's erbout."

The Havey leader only nodded, and his steady eyes and straight mouth-line did not alter their sternness of expression.

He saw the stiffed little gasp with which the girl read the ultimatum of his set face and the sudden mist of tears which, in spite of herself, blurred her eyes. He pushed forward a chair and gravely inquired: "Hain't ye better set down, ma'am?"

She shook her head and raised one hand, which trembled a little, to brush the hair out of her eyes.

Palpably she was trying to speak, and could not for the moment command her voice. But at last she got herself under control, and her words came slowly and carefully.

"Mr. Havey, I have very little reason to expect consideration from you. Even now, if it were a question of pleading for myself, I would die first, but it isn't that." She paused and shook her head. "You told me that I must fail unless I came to you. Well, I've come—I've come to humiliate myself. I guess I've come to surrender."

His face did not change and he did not answer. Evidently, thought the girl bitterly, she had not sufficiently abased herself. After a moment she went on in a very tired, yet a very eager voice.

"You are a man of action, Mr. Havey. I make my appeal to your manhood. I suppose you've never had a dream that has come to mean everything to you—but that's the sort of dream I've had. That little girl, Dawn, wants a chance. Her little brother wants a chance. I've humbled myself to come and plead for them. If you take them away from me you will smash my school. I don't underestimate your power now. Children are just beginning to come to me, and if you order these to leave, the others will leave, too, and they won't come back. It will kill my school. If that's your purpose, I guess it's no use even to plead. I know you can do it—and yet you told me you weren't making war on me."

For a Time Bad Anse Stood There Regarding Her With a Steady and Piercing Gaze.

"I reckon," interrupted Brother Talbott slowly, "ye needn't have no fear of chet, ma'am. Anse wouldn't do that."

"But if you aren't doing that," went on Juanita, "I want to make my plea just for the sake of these children of your own people. I'm ready to accept your terms. I'm ready to abase and humble my own pride, only, for God's sake, give them a chance to grow clean and straight and break the shackles of illiteracy."

She waited for the man to reply, but he neither spoke nor changed expression, so with an effort she went on, unconsciously bending a little forward in her eagerness:

"If you could see the way Dawn has unfolded like a flower, the thirsty intelligence with which she has drunk up what I have taught her; the way it has opened new worlds to her; I don't think you could be willing to plunge her back into drudgery and ignorance. She is a woman, or soon will be, Mr. Havey. You don't need women in your feud."

Again came the cautioning voice of the preacher in his effort to keep her away from antagonizing lines.

"They hain't been called away fer no reason like that, ma'am." But Juanita continued, ignoring the warning:

"The other boy is too young for you to use yet. Let him at least choose for himself. Let him reach the age when he shall have enough knowledge of both sides to make his own choice fairly. I'm not asking odds." You have Jeb, and he wears your trademark in his face. The bitterness that lurks there shows that he is wholly your vassal; yours and the feud's. Doesn't that satisfy you? Won't you let the others stay with me?"

She broke off with a gasp. Anse Havey's face stiffened.

Even now he did not speak to her, but turned toward the missionary.

"Brother Talbott," he said slowly, "would ye mind waitin' out there on the porch a little spell? I'd like to talk with this lady by herself."

When he had gone there was a short silence, which Havey finally broke with a question:

"Why didn't ye say all these things to Jeb? I sent the letter on his say-so."

"But you sent it—and all the Havey power is in your hands. Jeb wouldn't understand such a plea. I come to the fountainhead. My school is not a Havey school nor a McBriar school. It is meant to open its doors to both sides of the ridge, regardless of factions."

"Did young Milt come there ter git education? I thought he went to college down below." The question carried an undertone of irony.

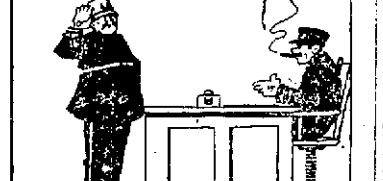

Juanita shook her head.

"No," she answered, "He came there as any other passer-by might have come, and he hasn't come often. Let me keep the children and he shan't come again."

For a time Bad Anse stood there regarding her with a steady and piercing gaze, while his brows drew together in a frown rather of deep thoughtfulness than of displeasure. "I asked Brother Talbott to go out," he finally said, "because I didn't hardly want to hurt your feelin's by telling you before him that your school can't last. You're goin' about it all the wrong way, an' it's worse to go about a good thing the wrong way than to go about a bad thing the right way. I told ye once that ye couldn't change the hills, an' that ye'd change first yourself. I say that again. Ye can't take fire out of blood with books. But if ye've done persuaded Brother Anse that you're doin' good, I didn't want him to hear me belittle ye."

Dinner Stories

Mr. Wrixon prides himself on being a philosopher. His six-year-old son is evidently a chip of the old block. The other night when his mother was putting him to bed she asked, "Robert, what makes you so cross and discontented? Doesn't mother do everything she can think of to make you happy?"

The youngster cogitated deeply for a moment.

"Well," he conceded with an air of resignation, "I s'pose it isn't your fault that you can't think of enough. You're only what God made you!"

A minister who had resigned from his church was making his farewell calls. He called at the home of one of his parishioners, who sent her little girl down to the parlor to entertain him for a few minutes, she not being ready to receive him. After a few customary remarks about the weather the little girl said to him:

"I hear we are going to have the sad pleasure of losing you."

Two octogenarian dandies at White Sulphur Springs, having been employed by one hotel management since the Civil war, are now retained as pensioners, though they occasionally do light and pottering jobs about the place. One day not long ago they were languidly raking leaves on the lawn. As a lady passed she heard them quarreling and stopped to listen. "Nigger," stated the older of the pair, "does you know what I wisht? I wisht? I wisht dat hotel yonder had a thousand rooms in it and you was laid out dald on every room!"

For the Family Medicine Chest

Green Bay, Wis., Mrs. Wm. F. Bubolz says: "I always use Foley's Honey and Tar for our children as it quickly breaks up their colds with no bad after effects, and they like to take it." In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed. Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were scarce. Handy and when money was scarce. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, raw or inflamed throat, hoarseness, tightness and soreness of the chest, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only healing ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.
